

TIS

will be of small use at sea, in any grown weather that makes the billows to rise. Raleigh's Essays.

Stood rank'd of seraphim another row,
In posture to diptode their second tire
Of thunder. Milton's Par. Lost, b. vi.

In all those wars there were few tritemes, most of them being of one tire of oars of fifty banks. Arbutnot.

2. [Corrupted from tior or tiara, or attire.] A head-dress.
On her head she wore a tire of gold, Fairy Queen.
Adorn'd with gems and ouches.
Here is her picture: let me see;
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers. Shakespeare.

The judge of torments, and the king of tears,
Now fills a burnish'd throne of quenchless fire,
And for his old fair robes of light he wears
A gloomy mantle of dark flame, the tire
That crowns his hated head on high, appears. Croft.

When the fury took her stand on high,
A his from all the snaky tire went round. Pope.

3. Furniture; apparatus.
Saint George's worth
Enkindles like desire of high exploits:
Immediate sieges, and the tire of war
Rowl in thy eager mind. Phillips.

When they first peep forth of the ground, they shew their whole tire of leaves, then flowers, next seeds. Woodward.

To TIRE. v. a. [tiran, Saxon.] To fail with weariness.
1. To fatigue; to make weary; to harrafs; to wear out with labour or tediousness.
Tir'd with toil, all hopes of safety past,
From pray'rs to wishes he descends at last. Dryden.

For this a hundred voices I desire,
To tell thee what a hundred tongues would tire;
Yet never could be worthily express'd.
How deeply thou art seated in my breast. Dryden's Persius.

2. It has often out added to intend the signification.
Often a few that are stiff do tire out a greater number that are more moderate. Bacon's Essays.

A lonely way
The cheerless Albion wander'd half a day;
Tir'd out, at length a spreading stream he spy'd. Tickell.

3. [From attire or tire, from tiara.] To dress the head.
Jezebel painted her face and tired her head. 2 Kings ix. 30.

To TIRE. v. n. [tiran, Saxon.] To fail with weariness.
TIREDESS. n. f. [from tired.] State of being tired; weariness.
It is not through the tiredness of the age of the earth, but through our own negligence that it hath not satisfied us bountifully. Hakewill on Providence.

TIREDSOME. adj. [from tire.] Wearisome; fatiguing; tedious.
Since the inculcating precept upon precept will prove tiresome to the reader, the poet must sometimes relieve the subject with a pleasant and pertinent digression. Addison.

Nothing is so tiresome as the works of those critics who write in a dogmatick way, without language, genius, or imagination. Addison's Spect. No. 253.

TIREDSOMENESS. n. f. [from tiresome.] Act or quality of being tiresome.

TIREWOMAN. n. f. [tire and woman.] A woman whose business is to make dresses for the head.
Why should they not value themselves for this outside fashionableness of the tirewoman's making, when their parents have so early instructed them to do so. Lodge on Education.

TIRINGHOUSE. n. f. [tire and house, or room.] The room in TIRINGROOM. } which players dress for the stage.

This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn brake our tiringhouse. Shakespeare.

Man's life's a tragedy; his mother's womb,
From which he enters, is the tiringroom;
This spacious earth the theatre, and the stage
That country which he lives in; passions, rage,
Folly, and vice, are actors. Wotton.

TIRWIT. n. f. A bird. Ainsworth.

TIS, contracted for it is.
'Tis destiny unshunnable. Shakespeare.

TISICK. n. f. [corrupted from phthisick.] Consumption; morbid waste.

TISICAL. adj. [for phthisical.] Consumptive.

TISUE. n. f. [tissue, Fr. tiara, to weave, Norman Saxon.] Cloth interwoven with gold or silver.
In their glittering tissues emblaz'd
Holy memorials, acts of zeal and love,
Recorded eminent. Milton's Par. Lost, b. v.

A robe of tissue, stiff with golden wire;
An upper vest, once Helen's rich attire;
From Argos by the fam'd adulteress brought,
With golden flow'rs and winding foliage wrought. Dryden.

To TISUE. v. a. [from the noun.] To interweave; to variegate.

TIT

The chariot was covered with cloth of gold tissud upon blue. Bacon's New Atlantis.

They have been always frank of their blessings to countenance any great action; and then, according as it should prosper, to tissue upon it some pretence or other. Wotton.

Mercy will fit between,
Thron'd in celestiall sheen,
With radiant feet the tissud clouds down steering. Milton.

TIT. n. f.

1. A small horse: generally in contempt.
No flooring of pasture with baggagely tit,
With ragged, with aged, and evil at hit.
Thou might'st have ta'en example
From what thou read'st in story;
Being as worthy to sit
On an ambling tit,
As thy predecessor Dory. Denham.

2. A woman: in contempt.
What does this envious tit, but away to her father with a tale. L'Estrange.

A willing tit that will venture her corps with you. Dryden.

Short pains for thee, for me a son and heir.
Girls cost as many throes in bringing forth;
Beside, when born, the tit are little worth. Dryden.

3. A titmouse or temit. A bird.
I TITBIT. n. f. [properly tidbit; tid, tender, and bit.] Nice bit; nice food.
John pamper'd equire South with titbits till he grew wanton. Arbutnot.

TITHEABLE. adj. [from tithe.] Subject to the payment of tithes; that of which tithes may be taken.
The popish priest shall, on taking the oath of allegiance to his majesty, be entitled to a tenth part or tithe of all things titheable in Ireland belonging to the papists, within their respective parishes. Swift.

TITHE. n. f. [tithia, Saxon, tenth.]

1. The tenth part; the part assigned to the maintenance of the ministry.
Many have made witty invectives against usury: they say, that it is pity the devil should have God's part, which is the tithe. Bacon.

Sometimes comes she with a tithe pig's tail,
Tickling the parson as he lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice. Shakespeare.

2. The tenth part of any thing.
I have searched man by man, boy by boy; the tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.
Since the first sword was drawn about this question,
Ev'ry tithe soul 'mongst many thousand dimes
Hath been as dear as Helen. Shakespeare. Troil. and Cressida.

3. Small part; small portion.
Offensive wars for religion are seldom to be approved, unless they have some mixture of civil tithes. Bacon.

To TITHE. v. a. [tithian, Saxon.] To tax; to pay the tenth part.
When I come to the tithing of them, I will tithe them one with another, and will make an Irishman the tithingman. Spenser on Ireland.

By decimation and a tithed death,
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loaths, take thou the destin'd tenth. Shak.

When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithes of thine increase, the third year, the year of tithing, give unto the Levite, stranger, fatherless and widow. Deut. xxvi. 12.

To TITHE. v. n. To pay tithe.
For lambe, pig, and calf, and for other the like,
Tithe so as thy cattle the lord do not strike. Tusser.

TITHER. n. f. [from tithe.] One who gathers tithes.

TITHYMAL. n. f. [tithymalle, French; tithymallus, Lat.] An herb.

TITTHING. n. f. [tithinga, law Latin, from tithe.]

1. Tithing is the number or company of ten men with their families knit together in a society, all of them being bound to the king for the peaceable and good behaviour of each of their society: of these companies there was one chief person, who, from his office, was called (toothingman) tithingman; but now he is nothing but a constable.

Poor Tom, who is whipt from tithing to tithing, and flock punished and imprisoned. Shakespeare. King Lear.

2. Tithe; tenth part due to the priest.
Though vicar be bad, or the parson evil,
Go not for thy tithing thyself to the devil. Tusser.

TITTHINGMAN. n. f. [tithing and man.] A petty peace officer; an under-constable.
His hundred is not at his command further than his prince's service; and also every tithingman may control him. Spenser.

To TITILLATE. v. n. [titillo, Lat.] To tickle.
Just where the breath of life his nostrils drew,
A charge of snuff the wily virgin threw;
The goomes direct to ev'ry atom just,
The pungent grains of titillating dust. Pope.

TITILLATION.

TIT

TITILLATION. n. f. [titillation, French; titillatio, Lat. from titillare.]

1. The act of tickling.
Tickling causeth laughter: the cause may be the emission of the spirits, and so of the breath, by a slight from titillation. Bacon.

2. The state of being tickled.
In sweets the acid particles seem so attenuated in the oil as only to produce a small and grateful titillation. Arbutnot.

3. Any slight or petty pleasure.
The delights which result from these nobler entertainments our cool thoughts need not be ashamed of, and which are dogged by no such sad sequels as are the products of those titillations, that reach no higher than the senses. Glanville.

TITLARK. n. f. A bird.
The smaller birds do the like in their seasons; as the leverock, titlark, and linnets.

TITLIE. n. f. [titille, old Fr. titulus, Lat.]

1. A general head comprising particulars.
Three draw the experiments of the former four into titles and tables for the better drawing of observations; these we call compiles.

Among the many preferences that the laws of England have above others, I shall single out two particular titles, which give a handsome specimen of their excellencies above other laws in other parts or titles of the same. Hale.

2. An appellation of honour.
To leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly?
Man over men
He made not lord: such titile to himself
Reserving. Milton.

3. A name; an appellation.
My name's Macbeth.
—The devil himself could not pronounce a titile
More hateful to mine ear. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

Ill worthy I such titile should belong
To me transgressor. Milton.

4. The first page of a book, telling its name and generally its subject; an inscription.
This man's brow, like to a titile leaf,
Foretells the nature of a tragick volume. Shakespeare.

Our adversaries encourage a writer who cannot furnish out so much as a titile page with propriety. Swift.

5. A claim of right.
Let the titile of a man's right be called in question; are we not bold to rely and build upon the judgment of such as are famous for their skill in the laws?
Is a man impoverished by purchase? it is because he paid his money for a lye, and took a bad titile for a good. South.

'Tis our duty
Such monuments, as we can build, to raise;
Left all the world prevent what we should do,
And claim a titile in him by their praise. Dryden.

To revenge their common injuries, though you had an undoubted titile by your birth, you had a greater by your courage. Dryden.

Conti would have kept his titile to Orange.
O the discretion of a girl! she will be a slave to any thing that has not a titile to make her one. South.

To TITLIE. v. a. [from the noun.] To entitle; to name; to call.

To these, that sober race of men, whose lives
Religious, titled them the sons of God,
Shall yield up all their virtue, all their fame,
Ignobly! Milton's Par. Lost, b. xi.

TITLELESS. adj. [from titile.] Wanting a name or appellation. Not in use.

He was a kind of nothing, titileless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' th' fire
Of burning Rome. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

TITLEPAGE. n. f. [title and page.] The page containing the title of a book.
We should have been pleas'd to have seen our own names at the bottom of the titlepage. Dryden.

TITMOUSE, or tit. n. f. [tiff, Dutch, a chick or small bird; tillingier, Islandick, a little bird; tit signifies little in the Teutonick dialects.] A small species of birds.
The nightingale is sovereign of song,
Before him fits the titmouse silent be,
And I unfit to thrust in skilful throng,
Should Colin make judge of my foolerie. Spenser.

The titmouse and the peckers hungry brood,
And Progne with her bosom stain'd in blood. Dryden.

To TITTER. v. n. [formed, I suppose, from the sound.] To laugh with restraint; to laugh without much noise.
In flow'd at once a gay embroider'd race,
And tittering push'd the pedants off the place. Dunciad.

TITTER. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A restrained laugh.

2. I know not what it signifies in Tusser.

TO

From wheat go and rake out the titters or tine, Tusser.
If care be not forth, it will rise againe fine.

TITTLIE. n. f. [I suppose from tit.] A small particle; a point; a dot.
In the particular which concerned the church, the Scots would never depart from a tittlie. Clarendon, b. viii.

Angels themselves disdain
To approach thy temple, give thee in command
What to the smallest tittlie thou shalt say
To thy adorers. Paradise Regain'd, b. i.

They thought God and themselves linked together in to fast a covenant, that although they never performed their part, God was yet bound to make good every tittlie of his. South's Sermons.

Ned Fashion hath been bred about court, and understands to a tittlie all the punctilios of a drawing-room. Swift.

TITTLIETATTLE. n. f. [A word formed from tattle by a ludicrous reduplication.] Idle talk; prattle; empty gabble.
As the foe drew near
With love, and joy, and life and dear,
Our don, who knew this tittlietattle,
Did, sure as trumpet, call to battle. Prior.

For every idle tittlietattle that went about, Jack was suspected for the author. Arbutnot's Hist. of J. Bull.

To TITTLIETATTLE. v. n. [from tattle.] To prate idly.
You are full in your tittlietattlings of Cupid: here is Cupid, and there is Cupid: I will tell you now what a good old woman told me. Stacey, b. ii.

TITUBATION. n. f. [titubo, Lat.] The act of stumbling.

TITULAR. adj. [titularis, Fr. from titulus, Lat.] Nominal; having or concerning only the title.
They would deliver up the kingdom to the king of England to shadow their rebellion, and to be titular, and painted head of those arms. Bacon's Henry VII.

Thrones, virtues, powers,
If these magnifick titles yet remain,
Not merely titular. Milton.

Both Valerius and Auslin were titular bishops. Ayliffe.

TITULARITY. n. f. [from titular.] The state of being titular.
Julius, Augustus, and Tiberius, with great humility received the name of imperator; but their successors retain the same even in its titularity. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

TITULARY. adj. [titulaire, Fr. from titulus, Lat.]

1. Consisting in a title.
The malecontents of his kingdom have not been base nor titulary impostors, but of an higher nature. Bacon's H. VII.

2. Relating to a title.
William the conqueror, howsoever he used the power of a conqueror to reward his Normans, yet mixed it with a titulary pretence, grounded upon the confessor's will. Bacon.

TITULARY. n. f. [from the adj.] One that has a title or right.
The persons deputed for the celebration of these masses were neither titularies nor perpetual curates, but persons entirely conductions. Ayliffe's Pervogon.

TITV. adj. [A word expressing speed, from tantivy, the note of a hunting horn.]
In a bright moon-shine while winds whistle loud,
Troy, titv, titv, we mount and we fly,
All rocking in a downy white cloud;
And left our leap from the sky should prove too far,
We slide on the back of a new-falling star. Dryden.

To. adv. [to, Saxon; te, Dutch.]

1. A particle coming between two verbs, and noting the second as the object of the first.
The delay of our hopes teaches us to mortify our desires. Smallridge.

2. It notes the intention.
Ambitious fool! with horny hoofs to pass
O'er hollow arches of resounding brais,
To rival thunder. Dryden's En.

She rais'd a war
In Italy, to call me back. Dryden's All for Love.

Urg'd by despair, again I go to try
The fate of arms, resolv'd in fight to die. Dryden.

I have done my utmost to lead my life to pleasantly as to forget all misfortunes. Pope.

3. After an adjective it notes its object.
We ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man. Shakespeare. Henry IV. p. ii.

The lawless sword his childrens blood shall shed,
Increas'd for slaughter, born to beg their bread. Sandys.

4. Noting futurity.
It is not blood and bones that can be conscious of their own hardness and redness; and we are still to seek for something else in our frame that receives those impressions. Bentley.

5. { To and again. } Backward and forward.
Imay binds and loofeth souls condemn'd to woe,
And sends the devils on errands to and fro. Fairfax, b. ii.

The spirits perverse
With easy intercourse pass to and fro,
To tempt or punish mortals. Milton.

Dread